thinking it would be handy to have where list locations, not just dist and direction. if nothing else it would make populating eq2map easier :>

The best way to do this would be to write a script that spews all of the actors and provides exactly the information you want in the format best suited for you. Scripts can even allow you to write it to a file.

The "where" command is just supposed to be something useful when playing the game. It's not intended to provide extensive amounts of data useful for other purposes.
